Providing Effective Remote / Online Teaching

12:30pm—1:30pm on Wednesday, 26 May 2021

Facilitated by: Professor Phil Newton, Director of Learning and Teaching, Swansea University Medical School

The COVID-19 pandemic sent us all into online learning and teaching, and has likely prompted a long lasting shift wherein many more of our educational activities will be delivered remotely. This webinar will describe the evidence base for what makes effective online learning and teaching, with a focus on practical, pragmatic tips for educators. It will cover all forms of educational practise, from lecture and seminars to practical skills and assessment.

Delivering Constructive Feedback

1:30pm—2:30pm on Tuesday, 22 June 2021

Facilitator TBC

The provision of effective feedback is an essential component of the trainer role. Providing constructive feedback at an appropriate time can drive the development of individuals and spur them on to develop a desire for improvement and continuous learning. This webinar will explore why feedback is important and how to deliver it effectively.
