1. Purpose and background

The Workforce Planning Competence Framework outlines the competences required for workforce planning for different types of job role within NHS Wales. The document can be used in conjunction with the NHS Wales Workforce Planning Capability Self-Assessment Tool to identify the skills and competences relevant to your role to support personal development.

What is the purpose of the Workforce Planning Competence Profile?

- To provide an inclusive framework which describes the skills and competence required to support effective workforce planning for different types of job role within NHS in Wales both now and in the future.
- To help build capability in workforce planning skills across NHS Wales.

Who was it designed for?

- Those who undertake a workforce planning role, or those who aspire to develop a career in workforce planning.
- Individuals currently undertaking workforce planning within their roles - to support their continued learning, development and growth.

How was it developed?

- The workforce planning competence profile was developed through engagement and collaboration with:
 - NHS Wales Workforce Planning Network
 - A broad range of colleagues across the WOD Community in NHS Wales
 - Specialists in Strategic Workforce Planning.
- These different groups provided information about the current and future requirements for workforce planning to support building capability in workforce planning skills across NHS Wales.
- A comprehensive review of both National Occupational Competences for Workforce Planning and existing frameworks across the broader spectrum of competences required to support effective workforce planning. This review was conducted to ensure that the workforce planning competence framework has been aligned to other relevant learning pathways. The review included NHS Wales Compassionate Leadership Principles, CIPD/WOD Profession, The Extended, Advanced and Clinical Practice Framework for Wales and Improvement Cymru Academy. These were alongside the wider National Occupational Standards and Skills for Health Workforce Planning Competences to ensure that the framework is underpinned by the values, principles and wider competence development to support effective workforce planning (see references at the end of this document).

2. Using the Framework

The framework can be used to support individuals at different points in their career as a workforce planner or those who are involved in workforce planning. It is also intended to underpin the national approach to workforce planning in NHS Wales.

How can the framework help me as an individual?

- If you are considering a role in workforce planning – the framework can help you to measure your current capability and experience against that needed to operate at a higher level and where you might choose to focus your development.
- If you are operating as a workforce planner – the framework can help you to both review your current effectiveness and in taking a more targeted approach to growing your capability.
- If you undertake workforce planning as part of your role you can identify areas for further development to support you, both in your role and CPD.

How can the framework help me to lead others in workforce planning?

- If you lead in workforce planning, it can help you to map current skill levels to identify potential gaps in individual/team capabilities to support the development plan for increasing workforce planning capability.

How does the framework underpin a national approach?

The framework has been designed to be applied to a range of different roles. It provides a foundation that supports building capability in workforce planning skills in the context of the NHS Wales approach to workforce planning.

The framework is intended to support and align to the different types of roles and levels summarised in the table overleaf. It provides both information for those considering a career in workforce planning as well as providing a comprehensive framework to support development of workforce planning capability skills at different levels.

3. Framework components

The framework is based upon four different levels of workforce planning roles, these are:

Level and Example job roles*	Examples of type of tasks and activity associated with workforce planning at each level.

3. Competencies

Purpose

- To describe the combination of behaviours and skills needed for effective workforce planning now and in the future.

Application

- To support self-assessment for workforce planners and those who practice, support and/or lead workforce planning to identify their current capabilities and learning needs for continued development in workforce planning.
- To support those who have responsibility for, or lead strategic workforce planning to map current capability. To identify potential gaps in individual/team capabilities to support development plans for increasing workforce planning skills.

Key considerations

1. The competencies are comprised of 8 individual indicators, each of which is clustered under a level to assist the user in identifying the development needs.
2. It is unrealistic and unachievable for any individual or team member to be exemplar across all areas. However, everyone can build upon their areas of strength, address less developed capabilities, and improve their overall effectiveness in workforce planning which will support a whole team approach to workforce planning.
3. Natural overlap and synergy exist between competencies; however, each level is unique, and all are of equal relevance in building capability in workforce planning.
4. Whilst the framework aims to be comprehensive it is not feasible to cover every desired characteristic. The aim is rather to provide focus and emphasis on the areas that most significantly differentiate between level in workforce planning.
